Barack and Joe:

I learned that the Election Day is November 6, 2012. You have to be 18 years old to vote. The candidates are President Obama and Mitt Romney. President Obama was a Lawyer and a Senator from Illinois. That's where he met his wife Michelle Obama. Barack Obama has a healthcare plan called: Obama care.

You should have a private place to vote so no one will see your vote. I voted with a real voting registration ballot. It was both fun to fill the ballot plus hard. Our classroom was the voting office, and Mrs. Thibodeaux was the voting office manager. It was fun to be in a voting office (our classroom).

President Obama was born August 4, 1961; Mitt Romney was born March 12, 1947. President Obama is a Democratic, and Mitt Romney is a Republican. Some of Barack Obama's favorite things are pizza, chili, and basketball. Mitt Romney's favorites are meatloaf and baseball. Barack Obama's hero is Martin Luther King Jr. Mitt Romney's hero is Ronald Reagan. Mitt Romney's wife is Ann Romney.

At my school we had a mock election on November 5, 2012. I voted for Barack Obama in the mock Election. The winner was . . . (DRUM ROLL) Barack Obama! In the real Election it was also Barack Obama! He is now on his second term as the President of the United States of America. That's amazing! Keep doing the right thing Barack so you can make America better. The actual results from the Real Presidential Election were 58% Barack Obama and 43% Mitt Romney. The points that the candidates had were 303 Barack Obama and 205 Mitt Romney. Sorry, try again Mitt Romney.

The End☺

Election 2012

You have to be 18 years old to vote for anyone running in an election. You also have to have a lot of things before you can vote. That's just one. You always have Election Day on the first Tuesday of November unless the first Tuesday is on the first day of November. There is never going to be an Election on the first day of November. Presidents work hard, very hard. There are also two main parties in a Presidential Election. They are the Democratic Party and the Republican Party.

Barack Obama is representing the Democratic Party. The donkey represents the Democratic Party. Mitt Romney is representing the Republican Party and the elephant is the animal that represents the Republican Party. There are lots of other parties. Another party is called the Green Day Party. There's a lot more, but I don't want to name all of them.

The people that the voters vote for are called candidates. Both candidates have a good shot at winning. Since all 50 states vote, that means they will have a good shot at winning.

Today you have to be 18 years old or older to vote, but it used to be different. You used to have to be 21 years old or older to vote. Below are some more requirements people must have to vote in an Election. You have to vote in the state you live in. You have to be 18 years old or older. You have to be a U.S citizen. Last, you have to be registered before the Election.

Our class had a mock Election on November 5, 2012, and I voted for Barack Obama. In the mock Election at my school Barack Obama won the Election. I really liked voting at my school.

The end!!
